the Legislative Council, yesterday.

Mr. C. CAMERON moved for an abstract of the motions prepared and of the Queensland Debt Act of 1922, and the Auditor-General's report thereon.

The motion was carried.

A message was received from the Assembly covering a bill for the disposal of certain Presbyterian church lands in Maitland. The bill was read a first time, on the motion of Mr. GOWAN.

After some discussion on the morals of horse racing, a motion made by Mr. OWEN, that the House adjourn until 7 p.m. on Thursday, was carried.

The Council adjourned at a quarter past 5 p.m.

There is no reason why similar fines and forfeitures should not be inflicted upon those who sell, under the name of spirits, poisons at all events immeasurably more destructive. Often the imputation of drunkenness is cast upon persons from the use of quantities which ought not to have produced the glass of the poor man thus levels him once with the brute, while the choice liquors

the Legislative Assembly, yesterday, the Ministers, in answer to questions, said that wells had been sunk and tank and engine erected at Gouanur at a cost of 2,124, and the water had been analysed and pronounced to be the best of three places tested; that Bullock Island contained 1,000 acres, and 100 acres, proposed to be annexed to the Government, had been offered for sale; that the received deposits of ballast free of charge; that the effect of the northern breakwater, at Newcastle, had been beneficial, the north channel having been deepened and a greater depth of water obtained on bar; that the ballast stone is laid down on the river breakwater by contract, call-d for by public contract; that the attention of the Government has been drawn to the overflowing of the water in the main channel, Newcastle, the stone bridge could be employed to clear it; that tenders for the bridge at Hay had been called for twice, and now contract had been taken by P. N. Russell and Co. £10,500; that the condition of the road to the Liverpool and Ashfield railway station would be repaired on by a surveyor without delay; that the condition of the road had been continued on the recommendation of a conference of District Surveyors; and that Mr. Mason had been referred of the ing of a school of Art. It is scarcely necessary to explain the object. Every one must see what an advantage it is to the individual who is about to engage in any business to know all about it before commencing to practise it. It is for this purpose that young men spend a large portion of time in training for some business profession before they enter upon it. The soldier likes to be well informed in the science war before he engages in it; the doctor, in the science of medicine; the lawyer, in the ties of Engineer of Permanent Way and Works the Engineer-in-Chief, and was now discharging the duty of Assistant Engineer.

Mr. SUTHERLAND, in answer to Mr. Hoskins, said that the matter between Mr. Whitton and Mr. Hoskins was then under inquiry.

MR. SIR JAMES HARRIS, in reference to this last matter, asked the Engineer-in-Chief whether, in consequence of the adjournment of the House, commencing, in the next week, on the 10th inst., the subject would, in other terms, upon the conduct of Mr. Whitton, be considered, had gone beyond his powers, entirely covering the head of his department, and interfering every branch of the railway service, even to the general management.

justice of law. For themselves and the community of which they are members it is better that they should be. The desire of every man is from the beginning to be able to bring to bear all the knowledge and experience of the experts who have preceded him upon the objects to which he addresses himself. He now works to the highest advantage. His energies are not wasted in fruitless endeavors, and in finding out what has been found out before. He cleaves a straight line to his mark.

Mr. SUTHERLAND explained that Mr. Mason had not been in any way removed from office. When Mr. Mason was removed from the office of engineer of permanent ways, he had requested Mr. Mason temporarily to undertake the duties. Other arrangements had now been made, and Mr. Whitton had resigned. Mr. Mason of the extra duty, which was no part of his regular duty, ought to have control of the officers under him, and the official head of the department should not be called to account for the latter which was still under inquiry.

with little or no deviation. By some it is considered that it is sufficient if this training is very practical. They think that if an iron worker, a tinsmith, a cotton spinner, or a glass maker are deft in the use of their tools, that is sufficient. But the general impression in the minds of thinking and inquiring persons is adverse to this conclusion. They do not regard the mere ability to use the tools of a trade dexterously to be the only or the chief qualification of a skillful workman. To satisfy ously disrespectful to the head of his department in moving Mr. Mason without first appealing to him. He contended that only the Government and Executive Council had the power to remove Mr. Mason. Mr. SAMPSON supported the action taken of the Executive Council. Mr. Sutherland and Sir James Martin having replied, the adjournment was negatived.

Mr. COWPER, in pursuance of the promise made to Sir James Martin, explained the course the Government intended to take. It was desirable to bring the question to a close at once, and the Treasurer intended to introduce the Appropriation Act that evening, and, such as the Government desired to go on with the he must be acquainted with the nature of the things with which he deals, and the principles by which they are controlled, together or apart. The ironworker and tinsmith should be conversant with metallurgy, mechanical powers, and the like; the cotton spinner, with the principles of applied mechanics, the principles of matter, the history of the cotton industry, and the like; and the glass worker, of such branches of the physical sciences as bear upon his art. The teaching

The petitions from Adelong and from the Municipal Conference were ordered to be printed. The petition from the Matland Presbyterian Church Land Bill was laid on the table and a third time and passed.

On the motion for postponing the Stamp Duties Bill, Sir J. MARVIN reminded the House that not more

It was supposed to be the apprentice is no longer thought to be enough. Now that workmen are expected to use their heads as well as their hands—to be thinkers, contrivers, inventors, as well as implicit copyists, something more is needed. Their knowledge must be obtained from the professor as well as the master, the book as well as the bench.

It is not to be supposed that because the attempt is made to teach all workmen to think, they will all necessarily become thinkers, contrivers, and inventors. No; to a cer-

the week ago the Treasurer, in the most distinct manner, had told the House that he was determined to give the opinion of Parliament on this bill. Mr. SANTER, said he was as anxious as ever to go on with this bill, but hon. members were anxious to get away to their homes, and time would not permit of a lengthened discussion which must necessarily ensue. Mr. FIDDLINGTON thought, after the pledge the Treasurer had given, that the House ought to insist on the measure being proceeded with. He moved that the bill be made the order of the day for to-day, and to take precedence.

This was negatived by 34 to 13.

number of them, probably a large proportion, the instruction in the theory of their trades, as it may be called, will be of no avail at all, they being no more than other untrained workmen. It is at the few it will be productive on the highest amount of good. The seed will fructify in their fertile brains, and the precious fruit will be the result—fruit that will be seen, and is seen, wherever this sowing of the head and hand is concurrent,

The resolutions from the Committee of Supply were agreed to; and votes were taken in committee of Ways and Means to cover them. The Appropriation Bill was brought in and read a first time.

Mr. SAMUEL moved the second reading of the Treasury Loans Funding Bill. He considered Treasury bills to be a security quite unsuitable for a colony, as short-dated securities of any kind were not in a country like this, where the value of money fluctuated so much. With regard to the objection that he was asking to borrow the £100,000 paid out in the year 1896, he said that the Government had proposed, and were now borrowing from other funds for

On the progress of the industrial arts.

On the continent of Europe great attention is being paid to Technological Education. It is not sufficient that the master should know the why and wherefore of every process that is performed; but that the workman should know it likewise. Nor are the artisans the only workmen to fall under this system. It is thought that those who skillfully draw the food of the community from the soil need a special mode purpose; and as to the assertion that raising the pound in the colony would be likely to fetter the money market by withdrawing a large sum from investment, he assured the Houses that there was no force in this statement, as over a million of Government securities was now held in the colony.

instruction to fit them for this delicate generation, and proper schools are consequently established by the State wherein all who are to be entrusted with the management of the land shall be well qualified to use it beneficially. The effects these institutions have had in some parts of Germany, for instance, is very marked indeed.

Here, however, we are left pretty much nature. The land is in the possession, to a very large extent, of men who are perfectly about which no votes were taken. The Government was in a minority, and with a deficit instead of a surplus, did not put forward a scheme showing a surplus, derived from taxation but from borrowed money. The borrowing too assumed a most objectionable shape, and it was not for the purpose of prospective expenditure, but for an expenditure incurred years ago. Mr. PIDDINGTON regarded the proposal now made as opposed to all sound principles of finance, and he received the reverse of every opinion the Treasurer gave.

Mr. MACLEAY declared his intention of voting against the bill, as he conceived that every Government ought to endeavour to get rid of the heavy responsibility portant of the use of it — of persons unacquainted with the most ordinary rules of farm husbandry — to say nothing whatever of the constitution of soils, the elements of vegetable and animal physiology, the rudiments of chemistry, mechanics, and other allied branches of knowledge—and yet no effort being made to introduce a better state of things. The application of the rule of thumb made to the usual amount of mistakes. We hear nothing but loss, disappointment, and dissatisfaction arising from a lack of knowledge.

ity of this deficit debt. Instead of this he found the Treasurer actually proposing to do that which he so strongly condemned when the rate of interest was 10 per cent. He said that the Treasurer insisted on this bill, in connection with other proposals. Those other proposals had been given up, and this, the most objectionable portion of his scheme, was retained. Instead of that, this part of the scheme could be given up, the same as the others had been. Mr. King said the financial programme of the Government consisted of the abolition of the Excise, the Stamps, the Customs, the Stamp Duties, the Corporation Act, and the Funding of the Public Loan. All but the last had been withdrawn.

age. An eye conversant with what should be done detects on every hand the most grievous blunders. There are instances of good management; but these are so few and so unexplained, that their influence is not felt far.

The need has occasionally been recognised in a school wherein the practice and theory of farming might be taught in this colony; but as yet we have never got further than talking the want and talking about it. Some

He would recommend the Government to withdraw this also.

Mr. COWPER went very fully into the origin of the bill, and pressed on the House to pass the bill enable the Government to keep up the credit of the Treasury.

Mr. HOSKINS objected to the bill,—first on the grounds already stated, and next because it proposed issuing a loan in a market different from that which it was, and in a form different from that previously adopted.

Mr. WEBB and Mr. BUCHANAN opposed the bill, and Mr. FORSTER supported it.

At 4 o'clock the House adjourned till 28 to 30.

...perhaps, public opinion will be sufficiently informed on this question to get a little further. But, in the meantime, can nothing be done with the appliances at hand? We are inclined to think there may, for instance, young men may be encouraged to study a variety of useful subjects that would fit them to bear an intelligent part in any undertaking pertaining to the land. The offer of one scholarship by the Government would do much to stimulate a desire

The House went into committee on the bill. On the first clause, giving the Government authority to raise £693,000, Mr. S. BROWN pointed out that £60,000 had been already paid, whilst the rest being payable yearly, it would be quite sufficient if bonds were provided to meet the payments at the end

THOSE MAGNIFICENT SQUATTAGES, KNOWN AS
MILTON, AND BOMPA,
COWAHALL,
HEEDY LAKE, AND GORDON'S PLAINS.
MILTON AND BOMPA.

These extensive estates are situated about 50 miles from Gladstone, a convenient railway port in the north-west, and embrace the valley of the Buaya River for some miles. The soil is fertile, the climate is well watered by the river, the vegetation is excellent pasture land for cattle, and the country is well timbered with creeks, and of eminent fatening quality.

MILTON is divided from Milton by a substantial log fence, and can be profitably worked as a separate estate. The estate of BOMPA is situated on the opposite bank of the Buaya River, and is a large estate, comprising first-class pasture land, timber, stone, and offices (all new), commodious stables, linn, stockyards and a large mill.

On Bompa there is a large horse-paddock, stocked

The stock consists of 8664 head cattle (originally D in diamond)
150 horses, 3-quarter bred mares
80 saddle horses
The herd is unsurpassed in Queensland, having managed throughout by experienced breeders who have been able to raise it to the high level of point of excellence, by the careful selection of stock and regular introduction of PURE BREED BULL and stallions, and the great attention bestowed it with very satisfactory results. The considerable investment there is not a better property to be obtained
the colonies.

COWWARRAL.
This highly improved station is also situated in the Curtis district, only 15 miles from Hampton, which, as a rule, ships from the annual advantages to the proprietors for disposal of the stock, and for fattening purposes it is among the most noted runs.

The homestead is perhaps the best in Queensland, and contains a large and comfortable residence, with hall, parlour, dining room, kitchen, and several other rooms, and verandah all round. The house is a 2-roomed cottage, with kitchen attached; extensive stables, and a large paddock, with a few trees-bones, a large yard, and a small garden. The house is built of brick, and men's iron-thing; good dairy, with milk shed, and yards for 200 cows.

The soil is easily worked, being subdivided by two fences.

With the station will be sold
The head of a good breeding 100 horses.

The cattle have been well and carefully bred, all a long day of age, and the fat best of the breed, high rates delivered on the sun at the best of the time, there is an excellent demand.

The station is a small one of pure-bred horses has the owners over $5000 and is unequalled in the North.

realizing extreme rates. There are now on the run, 60 to 70 head of cattle, 100 to 150 head of horses, and the well-known and famous COVINGTON and the imported bull LORD STEWART. The COVINGTON and STEWART are permanently watered by the Bucklin River, Fletcher's and Sandy Creeks, which run throughout the country. The country is good and abundant, the range being only half stocked.

The sheep are from the celebrated flocks of A. H. Palm and W. H. Palmer, and are running during the last years at 15c per head, and the range is from Douglas and W. H. Palmer and W. H. Palmer and W. H. Palmer stud stock. All cattle and aged sheep have recently been sold at 10c per head, and the range is now well stocked, and in good condition.

The improvements are very complete, there being a large packing shed, with 24 stalls for a splendid horse and carriage, and a large stable, with 15 stalls for horses, kitchen, stores, and out-buildings; 6-stall stable, 1 horse barn, and a large corral (all new).

With the station and the improvements, the range is now well stocked, and in good condition.

450 cattle
80 horses, including the thoroughbred horses + a guinea.

Immediate inspection of the above runs is especially recommended, as they are placed in the market for positive sale and the Auctioneers feel that the limits of an advertisement cannot admit of an adequate description of their respective terms.

WORKING ORDEAL. No outlay required for improvements, which have been carried out on the most economical and successful basis. The main crops are WHEAT, PEAS and clover. Two much cannot be said in favour of cattle, sheep, and horse stock, which are all well and favourably disposed of. The runs are situated in the best pasture country, and the best markets in Queensland, there is every facility for disposing of fat and surplus stock to the very best advantage.

TERMS:
One-third cash, balance by promissory notes for 12 months, with interest, payable by instalments, secured
